CROUCH VS. HARDIN.

A FREE-FOR-ALL FIGHT FROM THE BIG NORTH.

The trial of the Crouch boys, five or six in number, for shooting and wounding, and knocking down with rocks, old man Ewell Hardin and his son William Hardin, in a free for-all fight out beyond Willisburg a couple of weeks ago, came up before Judge Thompson Tuesday

It was at first reported that old man Hardin had received a mortal wound from a pistol shot, but he appeared at the trial slightly disgured but still in the ring. He had been shot through the right side and hit in the right eye with a rock. William Hardin was shot a couple of times in the arm, but his wounds were also slight. The testimony at the trial was somewhat mixed but the particulars were about like this: One of the Crouch boys it seems had made a scandalous remark about Will Hardin's sister, which came to the ears of the Hardins. By agreement the parties met "up on the road," at a point which appears to have been used as a sort of battle ground, to straighten it out. A few words were passed and the fight began, with old man Hardin and his son Will on one side and and the Crouches on the other. The former was knocked down and shot before he could do anything and William was treated to a similar dose. The Crouches were unhurt. The trial of the case consumed the best part of the day and the evidence was conflicting At the conclusion of the evidence Judge Thompson announced that he would hold two of the Crouch boys over to the Grand Jury to answer the charge of shooting and wounding with intent to kill, and with striking and wounding. Bond was furnished at $200 each.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Imogene Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Thos. Eggers, 120 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Haydon & Robertson, Druggists. Regular size 50c and $1.

The Fiercest Fight.

This is a great year for bolting on all sides and in all directions. It began on the national stage with the Prohibitionists, splitting their party in twain. A few days later Senator Teller and a considerable following bade a tearful adieu to the Republican Party, and went out to become an annex to the Democracy. Then followed the split in the Democratic family in national gathering assembled, and this was soon succeeded by the deep dissruntlement of the "middle of the road" Populists. Bolts in States, Congressional districts, and counties have resulted from these national incidents until parties have become so numerous that the supply appears to be somewhat in excess of the demand. But it is a good time for the independent voter, for he has his choice of long lists of candidates for every office. It is a good time, too, for ambitious local statesmen who pride themselves on the honor of running for office, even in a hopeless race.—Ex.

Sutherland's Eagle Eye Salve Cures.

No Fusion.

The Populist and Democratic Committees met in Elizabethtown yesterday, to discuss the Congressional race, and, if possible, arrange for the withdrawal of either the Populist or Democratic candidates. Durham and Smith respectively. The Committees concluded that neither had the power to remove, consequently if neither of the candidates would withdraw voluntarily matters would have to remain as they are, and fusion would be impossible. As it is not probable that either Smith or Durham will withdraw the prospects of the election of a Democrat to succeed Congressman Lewis are not very encouraging.—Danville Advocate.

Durham Still In It.

A special from Sonora, Ky., says: "Hon. J. E. Durham, the Populist candidate for Congress in this district, spoke to a large crowd here tonight. He mainly dwelt on the leading issues of the day, the tariff and money question. Mr. Durham is a typical old Kentucky gentleman, and stands as high for purity of character and honesty of purpose as any man in Kentucky. He made a splendid presentation of the question from a Populist point of view, and paid a high compliment to the integrity of his opponents, especially Hon. John W. Lewis.

He said that under no circumstances would he withdraw from the race, and that he would be a candidate until 4 o'clock, p.m., November 3, 1896.

He invited Hon. John W. Lewis to meet him in joint debate, and the gentlemanly courtesy Mr. Lewis extended to him was such that no gentleman but could admire. He has not yet met Hon. Dave Smith in debate, but is anxious to do so at any of his appointments. Judge Durham is strictly in earnest and if the Populists think he can get him off the track they are sadly mistaken in the man. He is making this race as the nominee of the Populist party, and his high character and known integrity is such that he will fight the race out, regardless of the result."

And So It Goes.

The dire calamities which are to befall this great country after election day are horrible to contemplate. It takes no difference who is elected, grim death and devastation, crime and pestilence will stalk abroad in the land, the widow and the orphan will cry aloud for aid that will not come and starving men will seek in vain for bread. Blood will flow like water, leaping babes will be torn from their mothers' breasts and cast to famishing dogs, while the Wall Street Baron or the Bloated Silver Mine Owner of the West will sit upon the apex of the Statue of Liberty and sing Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay.

To be convinced of this, all one has to do is to listen to the political discussions to be heard on all sides.

"I don't know what I will do if Bryan is elected," remarked a commercial traveler yesterday. "Several of my customers have told me that if McKinley was beaten they were going to close up their stores and see what happened. They were not going to buy any more goods, and were going to convert their money into gold and put it where it would be safe."

"Yes," remarked a Bryan man in the crowd, "A farmer told me yesterday that he had his farm sold at seventy five dollars an acre provided McKinley was elected, and he was glad of the chance, for if the Republicans were successful he would buy it back again in six months for a third of the money."—Danville Advocate.

Wheat continues on the rise and sold at Chicago the first of the week at 79 cents. Farmers who have held their wheat in this county can easily get an advance of 15 cents over the price at threshing time.

The reports from the country are very satisfactory, and we learn there is some little stripping going on, and we think that there will be new tobacco placed upon the market very early, as it is the general impression among the growers that the first shipments will do much better than afterwards. There is no doubt that the new tobacco will be purchased quite freely by the manufacturers as soon as it comes to market, and they will discard the old tobacco as soon as possible, on account of its inferiority. We consider our shippers will make no mistake in disposing of the old as fast as it can be done, in order not to allow it to come in competition with the new.—Cincinnati Tobacco Journal.

Mr. T. D. Clarkson is in Bloomfield for a few days.

The banns of matrimony were published Sunday between Miss Hattie Hamilton and Mr. John L. Barber, of Louisville. Miss Hattie is a beautiful, bright girl, and her friends here will miss her very greatly. The marriage will occur some time this month and will be quite a brilliant social event.

Mrs. Kate Williams, of Spring field, spent Sunday at home.

Hon. Ben L. Bruner spoke here on Thursday in behalf of sound money. Quite a crowd were out to hear him, composed of a goodly number of the colored genry We were very sorry that some of our bright free silver orators were not present to answer him as it seems almost impossible to get the dusky sons of Africa together to hear the right side of the all-important and all-absorbing money question.

The Hon. J. C. W. Beckham spoke here last week to an enthusiastic audience of Democrats. In mentioning our orators we need not go back to Clay, Webster or Calhoun, so long as we have such a one as Beckham, whose patriotism and oratory has the true ring for which Kentucky statesmen are so famous.

News has reached us of the approaching marriage of the editor of the NEWS-LEADER. Mr. Davison is a bright young man belonging to one of the finest old families in the State, and we hope he will not consider it amiss, or too previous if we extend to him our warmest congratulations. Apropos, we trust that it will only add to the success of the paper when there is an addition to the editorial staff, or a power behind the throne, as it were.

THE WATCHERS.

O'er whose unfevvered eyes
Forever watch the ocean's rim,
Your ships pursue 'neath friendlier skies
Rest far beyond your vision dim.

Perhaps in some sweet bay they wait
Where tides the primal, perfect day,
Where airs from springtime linger late
Or never perish quite away.

In some fanoff, diviner land
Where never guessed or wealth grows old,
Safe harbored they may wait your hand
To strike their sails and yield their gold.

JUNIPER'S DEFEAT.

He Invaded the Kitchen and Then Fled Before the Enemy.

"Bridget has been so cross and hateful and impudent that there's been no living with her today," said Mrs. Juniper when her husband came home the other evening.

"Impudent, Mrs. Juniper?" he replied. "You don't mean to tell me that you allow that servant girl to be impudent to you?"

"Allow her, Mr. Juniper? That girl would be impudent to an angel if she happened to be on her high horse."

"Well, I'm not an angel by a long shot, but I'd like to see her be impudent to me, and if she's been saucy to you she'll have to apologize for it."

"Don't you go near her while she's in her present mood. You'd better keep out of the kitchen."

"Well, I think I see myself keeping out of my own kitchen if I want to go into it. I will go into the kitchen, and I'll rank Miss Bridget O'Calligan down over her high horse."

Heedless of his wife's protests, Juniper went boldly out into the kitchen and said:

"Now, Jane girl, I hear that you've been impudent to your mistress."

"Impudent to me mistress, is it? Dedad, an who are you to make a bin hrazy ay comin in here into me kitchen to talk to me as ye talk to your wife. Impedent, is it? Begorry, an yera foine bitrud to say 'impedent' to anny man, an it O!"—

"Look here, you"—

"O'm lookin here all roight, sor! O'm lookin roight in de face on it's Bridget O'Calligan who'll take de opporchewnity av sayin to yer ugly cold face phwat she's had in mcind to say iver since she kem into this house, for O!"—

"You impudent"—

"Aisy, now, aisy, me foine gintleman, or ye'll larve me kitchen wid a dip per av scaldin wather aroun your back an the feet av Bridget O'Calligan assistin ye out. Whin a man has the divil's own tongue in his head as ye have whin things don't go his way, he's no call to use his word 'impedent' to anny man, an while he flings at me he'll git it sint back again, begorry, for it's not me that's afeard av any two legged thing that walks the green airth, an so"—

"I tell you that"—

"O tell ye to kape yer tongue still an not chip in whin your betters has the flure! Open your jaw agin whin a body is talkin, an O'll mop up me kitchen flure wid ye an pitch ye out de windy afterward. O! will that! O'm not wan to take that! O'm not one to take impedence from the loike av ye, an O!"—

But Juniper had fled up the back stairs, where he nearly went into an apoplectic fit when Mrs. Juniper, who had been listening at the head of the stairs, said between her giggles:

"Well, how did you come out, Mr. Juniper?"—Detroit Free Press.

A Philadelphia Mrs. Malaprop.

There is a Mrs. Malaprop living up town whose queer blunders in her everyday talk would fill a good sized volume, and most of them are funny enough to deserve publication. She was telling a neighbor the other day about a friend of hers who had bought a bicycle. "He went and bought the thing," she said, "and when he went out to ride it the first thing you know it fell apart. 'Why don't you go,' see I to him, 'and get a good wheel and pay for it on the European plan?' " Yesterday she went over to a neighbor's house for a recipe for mayonnaise dressing. She said: "How d'ye do, Mrs. Smith? I want to make chicken salad tonight, and I thought I'd get you to give me a recipe"—pronouncing it in two syllables—"for Mayonnaising dressing." Last winter her house caught fire and was slightly damaged. To her friends she explained that the trouble was caused by a disinfected fire. On another occasion an accident occurred on the street opposite her house. She and her cronies were discussing the affair across the back fence. "I didn't know there was an accident at all till I heard the avalanche a-comin down the street a-ringin the bell," she also told Mrs. Smith one day that she had read in the paper that milk was a good "antedote" for poison.

KENTUCKY'S VOTE.

Chairman Roberts Claims That the State is Safe for McKinley.

OFFICIAL ESTIMATES GIVEN

Chairman Sam J. Roberts has given out his first official estimate of the situation in Kentucky. It was given in a response to a telegraphic inquiry from the New York Press. Mr. Roberts' statements are very conservative, but strongly of the opinion that McKinley will carry the State. The interview is as follows:

"The Republican State Executive Committee has made no claim as to the size of the majority in Kentucky, but it has a growing confidence that the State is safe for McKinley and Hobart. Our poll of the State, the declaratrons of voters as they registered in the cities and towns, the conceded strength of the sound money Democratic movement and the drift of our correspondence with the party organization encourage the belief that we shall win a splendid victory for McKinley, sound money and protection. The much advertised free silver Republican defection is a myth. Two per cent of last year's Republican vote, or less than 3 500 is an extravagant figure, and many of our best informed men say it will not reach 1 per cent. The sound money Democratic element certainly includes 20 per cent of the old time Democracy, or upwards of 35.000 votes, but as some of these rejected Hardin last year and voted with the the Republicans, their votes helped to make Governor Bradley's 8.000 plurality.

"There is every reason to believe there will be a defection of 15 per cent, or over 24,000 votes, from last year's Democratic vote which will just offset the vote cast for Weaver in 1892, the high water mark of the Populists, who are this year fused with the silver Democrats The Republican loss from free-silver defection and scattering Populists who voted with the Republicans last year on State issues will, I believe be fully balanced by the Populists who reject fusion and who will either stay at home on election day or vote only for members of Congress in the western districts of the State where they are strong and have several aggressive Congressional candidates. Of the 24 000 increase in the sound money Democratic element over last year, the most conservative estimates give McKinley 10 per cent, or 12.000 votes, leaving an equal number for Palmer and Buckner. On the basis of these conservative calculations, I believe McKinley and Hobart will increase Gov Bradley's majority by such proportion of the sound money Democrats as decline to take any chances, by voting for the Indianapolis ticket. Our advices the past few days have been exceedingly encouraging, especially from Western Kentucky, the free silver and Populist stronghold, where the sound money Democrats will almost unanimously vote for McKinley and the Republican candidates for Congress and the Court of Appeals. The Republicans and National Democrats have been sending their best speakers into that hitherto neglected section, and the reported change of sentiment there amounts to little short of political revolution. From our point of view, it is impossible to figure out any other result in Kentucky than a great victory for McKinley and Hobart, sound-money and protection.

SAM J. ROBERTS, Chairman."

TOMORROW.

Tomorrow—yes, to-morrow
When will it come, I pray?
It always says 'tis coming,
But I never see it today.
It's always in the distance,
And it is an elusive thing,
And, still to be born, I hear it
In just one more day.

But when that day appeareth
Boys, it, tomorrow, too,
I get to tired of waiting,
It merely must be here.
Sometimes I work and labor,
Save, toil tomorrow, too,
Cause that's the day I always
I know not what to do.

I know to-well to-morrow
Will never come, anon,
By fitting day before it,
You never here it soon.
So on our walk it I tomorrow
To do to-day should be done
Today, for you'll be waiting
Each waiting of the sun.

The cranberries are fine in
And it will be with you
For when you think you've gained it
'Twill be today, I fear
Tomorrow will will mock you
As long as ocean sings
I'll cease to pay tomorrow
And all my promises keep.

To-night farewell, tomorrow,
E'er fill my path to-day,
While you will have to catch it
And that it will "today."
Oh, dance, oh, sparkling moment!
I long to welcome you
Ah, will you ever greet me
Your "tomorrow" here to view?

How to Detect a Real Ghost.

Here is something that will be of absorbing interest to the great mass of people who patiently have never seen a real ghost, but who are living in mortal dread that they may run up against one on any dark night. The article is from "The Annual of Scientific Discovery."

"Every one who has pressed his eyes when shut is more or less aware of the curious colored figures that are thus brought before the consciousness, and others brought aware that when looking through a curiously shaped bodies float before the eye as though they really occupied a place in the horizon of vision. These last are occasionally sufficiently obvious to cause annoyance and the consulting of physicians, who call the disease by a high sounding name which means flitting flies.' These subjective phenomena of the eyes have sometimes assumed very definite forms, and their study has enabled the physiologists to give what are considered very satisfactory explanations of the supposed appearance of ghosts to persons of diseased visual apparatus.

"Besides bringing to light many interesting particulars concerning the sights and wonders which seem persons see during their waking hours, these researches have also accounted, for many so called visions. They also give a ready means of detecting a real ghost. All that is necessary for this purpose is, when the supposed ghost is seen, to press the sides of the eyeball with the finger, when, if such pressure does not have the effect of doubling the image, the presence of a real or objective ghost may at once be doubled and the whole scare be referred to some defect of vision."

Dawn In an African Village.

I slept in a house belonging to the African Lakes company, in a group part of habitation at night. Rats galore crowd about the roof, chasing one another and squealing most pitcously. I was awakened in the morning by cocks crowing. There was a limit of night insects; the houses in the dawning light were an indistinct, dull brown, the grass was wet with dew. I heard the shuffling of reed doors slid to one side or their grating on clay flooring when flung open. A few natives begin to appear, exchange friendly greetings and start to blow up fires; men, women and children crowd around the fires, the gilded clouds in the east withdraw, the sun peeps on the horizon, fires are soon deserted and daily work begins.—Century.

Mr. Van Braun—I don't know whether that is a compliment or not. How did she come to say it?

Mr. Snaggs—She did not say it in so many words, but she said you looked like a smart man.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

THE NEWS-LEADER

THURSDAY, OCT. 22, 1896.

E. L. DAVISON, JR.

A UNIQUE scheme of campaigning is being worked in Cincinnati by the free silverites: Government Square is utilized for the new method, which is comprised in the erection of several rough stands and in a supply of speakers, supposed to be "accidentally" in the crowd. No speech occupies more than five minutes, and they are delivered in the homeliest language by men in the homeliest style of clothing. The speeches are all for free silver. Sometimes a "gold bug" asks a question and there is a ready answer from the man on the platform. Then before the gold bug knows where he is at, he is boosted onto the platform and pelted with questions from "workingmen" who are just happening to be passing and, of course, the gold bug, who is one of the actors, gets the worst of the argument, and admits that he cannot answer the questions propounded by his free silver friends. Then another free silver speaker gets up and the farce goes on. The scheme attracts immense throngs, and might have some effect were it not for the fact that the working men soon caught onto the play.

THE free turnpikes have broken loose in Franklin county, where the toll gates were raided last Monday. In the County Court at Frankfort the trial of two companies for failing to keep their roads in good condition were continued. This probably caused the raid. Every toll gate or poll at every gate on three roads in the northwestern portion of the county is said to have been destroyed. Horsemen and farmers who have come into Frankfort from Bald Knob, Flat Creek and Peake's Mills turnpikes say that fully 300 or 400 men were engaged in the depredations, that they divided into three sections, each section taking one road and the gates before them. One section is said to have consisted of masked men on thirty white horses, and is described as ghost-like in the shifting moonlight. None of the toll houses were destroyed.

SEEING his friends desert him in droves, Col. John D. White threw discretion to the winds at Somerset, where he denounced one of his staunchest supporters, Judge Catron, for having sold him out before the Congressional Committee at Williamsburg. Dave Colson spoke at Somerset to a big gathering, and White spoke later, denouncing Judge Catron as stated. In reply Judge Catron branded White as an infamous liar. The Jayhawker carried Pulaski county in the Republican primary, but it is stated that he has no following that will go with him outside the party lines, where he seems determined to put himself.

How the Dipper Saved the Farm.

Father was sick and the mortgage on the farm was coming due; I saw in the Christian Advocate where Miss A. M. Fritz, of Station A, St. Louis, Mo., would send a sample combination dipper for eighteen 2-cent stamps, and I ordered one. I saw the dipper could be used as a fruit jar filler, plain dipper, fine strainer, funnel, strainer funnel, sick room warming pan and a pint measure. These eight different uses make the dipper such a necessary article that I want to work with it and it sells at very near every house, and in four months I paid off the mortgage. I think I can clear as much as $200 a month. If you need work you can do well by giving this a trial. Miss A. M. Fritz, Station A., St. Louis, Mo., will send sample for eighteen 2 cent stamps.—write at once. JOHN G. N.

A CARD.

TO THE VOTERS OF WASHINGTON COUNTY:

The November election is fast approaching, we shall soon be called upon among other things to name our choice as to who shall represent us in the Congress of the United States. Believing as I do that we should choose a man on account of his personal merit, rather than one for his prejudice on some political question; I therefore ask

Why not vote for John W. Lewis? He is our countryman, friend and neighbor. Two years ago we honored him with a seat in Congress, and he in return honored us by filling that seat with dignity and ability. Some of his predecessors said that it required six or eight years for a member to become sufficiently acquainted with the workings of the House as to be of any benefit to his people, and as history shows, very probably true as to them, but equally as incorrect as Mr. Lewis. His reputation as a gentleman and a lawyer of ability preceded him, and he was at once upon his entry recognized by Speaker Reed as a man of worth. So much so, that the Czar placed him upon the "Committee on the Judiciary," one of the most dignified and important committees in the House. An honor very rarely conferred upon a new member. He proved no disappointment, but at once set to work to do something for his long neglected district. How well he succeeded is now generally known to us all.

Among some of the things which he did, was to secure an increase or allowance of over two hundred pension claims, many of which had been pending over twenty years, thereby bringing through the disabled soldiers widows and orphans of the late war over $50,000 in cash into the district. He secured a cash appropriation of $48,000 for the improvement of Rough River in Ohio county, and that money is now being expended in that direction. This was the largest cash appropriation carried by the River and Harbor bill for Kentucky. He obtained a cash appropriation of $1,000 for the purpose of erecting a court house in Taylor county, in lieu of the one destroyed by soldiers during the late war; and $1,666 66 for a similar purpose in Meade county. Each of these claims had been pending for twenty-five years. He had favorably reported through the proper committee a Bill Appropriating $50,000 for the purpose of erecting a Public Building at Lebanon, Ky. This bill will in all probability be passed at the next session of Congress. He introduced a similar bill for the benefit of Elizabethtown, Ky. He introduced a Bill which was favorably considered, to appropriate $100,000 with which to buy the farm on which Abraham Lincoln was born, and erect thereon a home to be shared alike by the old and disabled Union and Confederate veterans, thus displaying the warm and friendly spirit and big kind heart for which he is noted. These are among the many things which Mr. Lewis has done for our district during his first term in Congress.

As to him personally, I need not further speak, all who know him, know him as a gentleman, elegant and refined in manner and deportment; warmhearted, he never allowed an object of charity or creditable want to pass unnoticed; generous and courteous to all, his word is as good as his bond. He is an honor and credit to our district. The third day of November we will be called upon to choose his successor.

Shall we let political harangue arouse our party spirit and induce us to choose an untried man? Or shall we allow calm, sober, unbiased, deliberate thought to control and return the man who has done more for our district in one year than has been done by all his predecessors in the past twenty, is the question for us to answer. VOTER.

The New Hook Spoon Free to All.

I read in the Christian Standard that Miss A. M. Fritz, Station A, St. Louis, Mo. would give an elegant plated hook spoon to anyone sending her 2cent stamps. I sent for one and found it so useful that I showed it to my friends and made $15 in two hours taking orders for the spoon. The hook spoon is a household necessity, it cannot slip into the dish or cooking vessel, being held in its place by a hook on the back. This spoon is something that housekeepers have needed ever since spoons were invented. Anyone can get a sample spoon by sending ten 2-cent stamps to Miss Fritz; this is a splendid way to make money around home. Very truly, J. S.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. 25c. Oct. 15-tm

If your children are subject to croup, watch for the first symptom of the disease — hoarseness. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse it will prevent the attack. Even after the croupy cough has appeared the attack can always be prevented by giving this remedy. It is also invaluable for colds and whooping cough.

If the hair is falling out and turning gray, the glands of the skin need stimulating and color food, and the best remedy and stimulant is Hall's Hair Renewer.

It Churns in One Minute.

I have been in the dairy business all my life and have many times churned for an hour before butter would appear, so when I heard of a churn that would churn in one minute, I concluded to try it. Every day for a week I used it, and not only could I churn in one minute but I get more and better butter than with the common churn. This is very important information to butter makers; the churn works easily and will churn an ordinary churning in less than sixty seconds. I have sold two dozen of these churns in the past month. Every butter maker that has seen me churn in less than a minute bought one. You can obtain all desired information regarding the churn by addressing J. F. Casey & Co., St. Louis, Mo., and they will give you prompt and courteous attention.

The Darlington, Wis., Journal says editorially of a popular patent medicine: "We know from experience that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is all that is claimed for it, as on two occasions it stopped excruciating pains and possibly saved us from an untimely grave. We would not rest easy over night without it in the house." This remedy undoubtedly saves more pain and suffering than any other medicine in the world. Every family should keep it in the house, for it is sure to be needed sooner or later.

A Chance to Make Money.

I have made $1.60 clear money in 37 days and attended to my household duties besides, and I think this is doing splendid for a woman inexperienced in business. Any one can sell what everyone wants to buy and every family wants a Dish Washer. I don't canvass at all: people come or send for the washer and every washer that goes out sells two or three more so they do the work to perfection. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes; I am going to devote my whole time to this business now and I am sure I can clear $2000 a year. My sister and brother have started in the business and are doing splendid. You can get complete instructions and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and if you don't make lots of money its your own fault. Mrs. W H

SOME miscreants in the spirit of mischief, devilment, revenge or pure cussedness, committed another outrage in the county last Tuesday night. The house belonging to one George Arbor, a colored man, was attacked by a party of some eight or ten men and literally torn to pieces. Arbor and his family had all gone to church and had left the house alone when the attack was made. A party of men who had been seen to pass out that way from town, and who seemed to be drinking are suspected. The house was situated beyond Willisburg. When the negro returned home he found his home in ruins. Arbor is known in the neighborhood as the "rowdy sort," which might have been counted as an excuse for destroying his house.

A Dandy Thing to Sell.

I have been doing so well this summer selling combination dippers that I think it is my duty to tell others about it. I have not made as much money as some I read about, but I never make less than $6, and often $5 a day; the dipper can be used as a fruit jar filler, a plain dipper, a fine strainer, a funnel, a strainer-funnel, a sick room warming pan and a pint measure. These eight different uses make the dipper such a necessary article that it sells at nearly every house, sy it is so cheap You can get a sample as I did by sending eighteen 2-cent stamps to pay postage, etc., to W. H. Baird & Co., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and they will mail you a dipper and you can go to work at once; anyone can make $3 or $4 a day anywhere. A READER.

THE Chatauqua Circle met at W. R. Thurman's on Friday evening, Oct. 16. At roll call each member responded with quotations from "As you like it." The address of welcome, by Miss Mag Thompson, proved her to be in truth, well chosen to be our leader. Mrs. Jack Thompson, in a most interesting way, told us of the cave dwellers. To most minds there is a peculiar fascination for these primitive people of the Stone age. Mrs. Thompson told us when and where their homes had been found; what manner of people they were supposed to be; that the art of engraving was known to them, and that they were evidently hunters and not "Tillers of the Soil." Miss Jennie Browne gave a short sketch of Julius Cæsar, which was well received. Miss Kate Mayes, in her own charming way, told us of Henry III., and the constitutional relationship between France and the United States, was very learnedly discussed by Miss Mary Browne, and in the class discussion on Character, Energy and Environments, it was shown that a strong Character will rise regardless of environments, and instances were cited to prove the fact. Adjourned to meet again on Oct. 30, 7:30 p.m., at Miss Jennie Browne's. Anyone interested in such work is cordially invited to attend our meetings. MEMBER.

SOME time ago the Court of Claims passed a law or resolution providing that no more claims will be paid or allowed by the county to parties for keeping paupers who do not go to the county poor house. This move on the part of he county Magistrates should be considered a good one by the taxpayers as the county is thereby saved an expense of several hundred dollars. A few individuals scattered about the county however, are deprived of some revenue derived from the keeping of paupers who really belong in the poor house provided by the county for that purpose. It was probably sympathy for some of these laster that prompted some one to send to one of the magistrates an anonymous letter in which wer threats dire enough to send the cold chills down the spinal column of a wooden Indian. The writer of this skull and cross bone epistle stated that if the obnoxious order was not immediately rescinded, that these magistrates must look a little out—that their houses would be burned and other penalties would be heaped upon them. One of the magistrates stated that he did not think that the court would be called together just yet to undo what they had done, and that he supposed they would take chances on loosing their homes.

This is but another outcropping of that spirit which has all too often disgraced our county and which if not checked may yet cause serious trouble.

Paducah, Ky., may well feel proud of some of her enterprises. Messrs. D. Wilson & Son, Kimble, Ky., write to the E. E. Sutherland Medicine Company as follows: "We wrote this to certify to the wonderful and grand good results from your Dr. Bell's Pine Tar-Honey, which is selling faster than any medicine we ever sold. People who never traded at our store have heard of it and come from adjoining counties for it. On case in particular is that of Mrs. Smith Wooldridge, of this place, who was so afflicted with her throat for over two years that she could not speak above a whisper. After used the first bottle of Dr. Bell's Pine Tar-Honey she could talk as well as ever, and the case is such a wonderful cure that her neighbors come in to see for themselves, and all are astonished to hear her talk. WOMAN'S VOICE.

Not in the swaying of the summer trees
When evening breezes sing their vesper hymns;
Not in the minstrel's mighty symphonies,
Nor ripples breaking on the river's brim,
In earth's best music, these may move awhile
High thoughts to happy hearts and darking cares beguile.

But even as the shudder's silken wings,
Skimming above the tides of the moon-lit lake,
Stir the still silver with a hundred rings,
So doth one sound the deepest spirit wake
To brave the danger and to bear the harm—
A low and gentle voice—dear woman's wildest charm.

An excellent thing it is, and ever lent
To truth and love and meekness. They who own
This gift, by kind gractous Giver sent,
Ever by noble deeds and faith are known;
By kind eyes that have wept, hearts that have sorrowed, by
By patience never tired, from their own trial borrowed.

An excellent thing it is, when first in gladness
A mother looks into her infant's eyes,
Smiles to its smiles, soothes to its sadness,
Pulses at its gladness, nurses at its cries;
He hod and sleep and smile are known;
All these come over hint with one low, gentle voice.

An excellent thing it is when life is leaving—
Leaving with gloom and gladness, joys and cares—
The strong heart, failing and the dark soul heaving,
With distant thoughts and with unwonted fears;
Then, the a woman's low, soft sympathy
Comes like an angel's voice to teach us how to die.

But a most excellent thing it is in youth,
When the fond lover hears the loved one's tone,
That fears but hopes to utter the truth—
How their two hearts are one, and she his own!
It makes even human music—oh, the spells
That bless the trembling tale a bright eyed maiden tells!

MASTER MANOLA.

Prince Neagoe Bassarab was a God fearing man who was ever seeking a way to display his piety. He had built the churches of St. George and the Metropolitan in Targovischta and the wondrously beautiful cloisters of Cosia and Tismana, the latter upon a rocky peak from which a cataract fell, and yet he deemed that he had not done enough. He longed to erect at Curtea de Argisch a church like no other in the world. He took far and near for architects noted for their skill and originality to undertake the work.

Among them was a man named Manola. Some say that he came from Macedonia, others that he was a Spaniard. He promised the prince to delight his eyes with a structure that in its harmonious union of Byzantine, Arabic and Persian architecture should be of unsurpassed loveliness. He chose the laborers that seemed to him most skilful and began his work with infinite joy and zest, for he felt that his power was ripe and that he was master of his art. But it was as if some evil spirit opposed him. No matter how deep the foundations were laid streams of water would gush forth. Loosen the soil and displace the stones. Daily they found the said left recently removed had drifted back and daily the walls had to be torn down and built anew. And when Manola, after working and thinking all day, left the place at evening with moist forehead and puckered brows, he knew the sunshine, came a slender form in snow white raiment; from her dark hair there floated a filmy veil; upon her shoulder she bore a pitcher; within her hand, a basket. 'Twas Anna, his young wife.

"O God!" he prayed, "hast thou wholly forsaken me? Thou hast indeed punished my arrogance. Release me from my pain. I cannot do this thing. But me not sacrifice my young wife, all that I can call my own in this strange land, my happiness, my life! Send a token that thou may come no further!"

As he stood upon the scaffold and prayed he felt that all eyes were turned coldly upon him, and he knew that he would be made to keep his oath.

And the heaven was black. From greenish black clouds came peals of sullen thunder and vivid sheets of lightning. There was a roaring and quaking as though the world was in its death struggle. A wind arose that bowed the mightiest trees and stripped them of their foliage. The men knelt and made the sign of the cross, but the young wife came calmly on, heeding not the tempest. She saw Manola's figure upon the scaffold outlined against the black, lightning streaked sky, and she hastened her steps toward him.

"O God!" pleaded he, "now she has reached the brook. Cause it to overflow that she may not cross it!"

And see, a rain descends as if the firmament had opened and every cloud had poured its contents upon the earth. Anna came nearer. And the brook swelled and foamed wildly. Not even a horse could swim across it. For a moment the whole landscape was hidden by the veil of rain. Manola clutched a beam and strove to pierce the vapor with his eager glance. Then all was still. The sun shone forth, and, look! Anna has taken off her shoes, tucked up her gown and is wading through the roaring flood. Manola stood motionless. His lips were white beneath his dark mustache, as the men who gazed dumbly up at him could see.

The young wife was now but a few steps away, and she nodded and smiled to him who stood aloft and in whose dark eyes lay the thought, "I had rather the stream had swallowed you than you should suffer this agony." He descended the scaffold, took from her the basket and pitcher and chided her laughingly for coming out in such wild weather, she whose approaching motherhood made quiet and comfort so essential. She noted a faint quiver in his voice and asked if the work was spoiled again.

"Come down and see for yourself what was ruined overnight. We are no farther now than we were yesterday evening."

She went down and viewed with troubled face the pools of water, the heaved up earth, the displaced stones. Meanwhile Manola gave a signal, and the masons began their work.

"Oh," said Anna, "I am in the way here. You must help me, husband, it is so high." And blushingly she extended her hand. He took it not.

"Stay down there a little longer, sweetheart. You can then see how quickly the men work. Besides, they have a fancy that the glance of your lovely eyes will make the wall strong."

The stones had reached her knees. She looked on smilingly. Now they were up to her waist.

"Manola," she cried, "now you must lift me, for I cannot get out of here by myself."

"Yes, my love, when it is time. Just one more moment."

"Manola! The stones crush me. Think of our babe, Manola!"

"Soon, soon it will be finished," said with his own hand he laid stone upon stone and urged the men to work faster.

"Manola, my breast hurts me. Let not them build any more."

But he answered not.

"Manola, let not them cover my mouth and eyes. I am so frightened. Manola, where are you? Why don't you speak? Oh, jest not so cruelly. It will cost my life. Manola, Manola!"

Just then they laid the last stone over the pretty young head. But the master made them work on and on. Noonday was long past, but no one thought of food. Naught was heard save impatient calls for brick and lime.

Lower sank the sun, yet higher rose the wall. The master swung his trowel with feverish hand and bent forward whenever the cry, "Manola!" came fainter and fainter from below. At last they ceased to throw down their tools and declared they would not raise another stone. Night fell. Manola went not home. Like a ghost he wandered to and fro upon the scaffold, and he feared its black rafters to heaven against the moonlit landscape. Then he strode through the fields, but a spell seemed to draw him back to the building place. He did not want to listen, yet he did so, and heard her still calling. There, silvery, cool and still flowed the Argisch. Surely its waters ought to wash away the sounds that tortured him so. He disrobed and stepped into the river, holding his head long beneath its dimpled waves. The water hushed the sounds. But scarcely had he ascended the bank ere he heard the calling again.

Months passed. The church with its five domes and richly decorated walls began to be a marvel of beauty. Then the work thereon ceased, for there was no money at hand. Manola raged. One passion yet lived in him, ambition, and consuming ambition to which he had sacrificed everything. No money.

Prince Neagoe accosted his councilors and asked them to levy additional taxes. But they shook their heads and said the country could bear no more. And was that structure, the glory of his reign, the ornament of his kingdom, to remain unfinished?

Just then the door opened, and there entered in all her grandeur and loveliness the Princess Despina, robed in white satin, a mantle of blue brocade, edged with rich sable clasped around her snowy throat. Over it rippled her soft brown hair almost to her feet. Upon her head was a cap of sable, from which today the diamonds were missing. No bracelets, necklace or earrings were visible, but a silken veil fell like a spider's web over her slender form. In her hands she bore a casket containing all her jewels, which she emptied before the prince. Then, shyly, as though about to confess a wrong, she said, "Take these and complete the church, else they shall be locked with the tears of women whose children are suffering of want." And she was gone ere the astonished men could reply.

The church was finished. Rightly was it called a wonderful structure. Each stone was carved and painted to represent a flower upon a golden ground, and no blossom was like another. The domes, the crosses and the chains which held the crosses in place gleamed with gold—like the sun itself. Around the roof were golden doves that held tiny bells in their bills, and every zephyr made these peal with marvelous sweetness.

But Prince Neagoe, who so ardently wished to see the church completed, and his faithful Despina, who had given all her possessions for it, had long closed their eyes upon this world, and their successor, Radu, was a cruel man.

All the scaffolds were removed except one small ladder, by which the prince ascended to the roof to view closely every detail of the superb work. Manola listened silently to the praise bestowed upon him. Even the huzzas of the admiring multitude brought no smile to his face. His eyes burned and glistened from nights of wakefulness and feverish thoughts. Prince Radu had seen everything.

"Well, Manola," said he at last, "would you pledge yourself to build a second church like this?"

"Certainly," answered the master. "The second should be a thousand times more beautiful. Now I realize my power." His face lighted up as he saw in his mind his next splendid work.

"In order that that shall not happen," said the prince, "you shall abide up here, my excellent master. Your men shall destroy the ladder as soon as I descend. I would not part the master from his work."

Manola stood speechless upon the shining roof. From the vast multitude that a few moments ago shouted his praises arose no word of remonstrance. No hand was raised to rescue him. On the contrary, they began to mutter: "The prince is right. The master is in league with the devil. He walled up his wife with his own hand. He deserves the punishment."

Even his own workmen said: "We would not have done it. He forced us to it—on oath. He helped wall her in, the poor woman. And she cried to him so piteously. He is a cruel, wicked man. Has he given us a kind word since that day? And it is to us that he owes the completion of this building. Let him starve up there. He deserves nothing better."

Not one pleaded for him. All gazed up with abhorrence at the man who had begun his great work in sin that would now be punished with death. But he stood with folded arms and saw the ladder removed, saw the people follow the prince, who mocked him as he left the place. His stood thus when night fell and thought of his whole life; his boundless ambition, to which he had sacrificed his happiness, his love, the only being in this wide unfriendly world that he could call his own.

Then there seemed to ring faintly from below the voice of his beautiful wife, "Manola, Manola!" Still the same sound that had haunted him so many nights and robbed him of sleep. The night was sultry and there was no dew. Like a flaming disk the sun arose and poured glowing rays upon the golden roof. All around the grass withered. Over the marsh hung a bluish, ghostly light. The Argisch seemed to have ceased to flow. Not even a gnat stirred in the hot air. Hunger began to gnaw at the bowels of the lonely man, and thirst, consuming thirst, parched lips, throat and breast. The next night there was again no dew. Not the slightest moisture lay upon the roof. A marble stillness was upon everything.

On the second day Manola's brain grew giddier and giddier, and he heard Anna's voice louder and clearer calling him as she did in life and as if she would appear before him the next moment.

Another long night, during which his mind was darkened by fever. He tottered to and fro upon the roof, and wherever he glanced he beheld Anna beckoning to him. At dawn a soft wind arose and all the bells began to peal. To the starving man they sounded like the voice of his wife. He reeled to the roof's edge, and with the cry, "I'm coming; yes, I am coming to you!" cast himself off. Where he fell there sprang up a fountain, but the water was salty like endlessly flowing tears.—Translated From the German of Carmen Sylva, Queen of Roumania, For Short Stories.

—FOR—

La Grippe, for Colds, Coughs, AND LUNG TROUBLES,

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Two years ago, I had the grippe, and it left me with a cough which gave me no rest night or day. My family physician prescribed for me, changing the medicine as often as he found the things I had taken were not helping me, but, in spite of his attendance, I got no better. Finally, my husband,—reading the case of a gentleman who had had the grippe and was cured by taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,—procured, for me, a bottle of this medicine, and before I had taken half of it, I was cured. I have used the Pectoral for my children and in my family, whenever we have needed it, and have found it a specific for colds, coughs, and lung troubles."—Mrs. Emily Woon, North St., Elkton, Md.

Found on a Battlefield.

A romantic story is told of the wife of Thomas E Watson, Populist candidate for vice president. Afterone of the battles of the civil war a richly dressed baby was found among the dead and wounded. No parents came to claim the child. They say that father and mother had perished in the strife. It is not known whether they were on the northern or southern side. But a southern soldier and his wife took the child they had found and cared for her as their own. The years passed and the little girl grew to be a handsome and cultured young lady. Tom Watson, farmer-lawyer, married her, and they have lived happily ever since.
